Tour of Maryland's Hospital: Nearly Four Decades After Privatization

8:30-9:30 am

Davidge Hall

You rotated through it while in school. You may have received some training here. But if you haven't been through the University of Maryland Medical Center in recent years, you'll have to see the transformation to believe it! This 45-minute presentation will include updates on the COVID response, our xenotransplantation program which includes the recent porcine heart transplant, new cancer tower, and a brief summary by the medical center's CEO Dr. Bert O'Malley. Learn about the hospital's growth from its conversion to a private, not-for-profit enterprise in 1984 to the thriving, 12-hospital system it is today.

FRIDAY

Friday, May 6

School of Medicine Update by Dr. E. Albert Reece, Dean

10:00-11:00 am

Davidge Hall

This annual medical school address for alumni will be the last presented by our dean, E. Albert Reece, MD, PhD, MBA, who steps down in June after 16 years at the helm. His presentation summarizes recent accomplishments at the school and offers insight into future developments. Our education, research, and patient care initiatives will be discussed, and the dean will have time to field your questions at the conclusion of his 45-minute presentation.

147th Harry & Vivian Kramer MAA Awards Luncheon & Business Meeting

11:30 am-1:00 pm

Westminster Hall

Greene & Fayette Streets

$40, Reservations required

Complimentary to the Classes of 1970, 1971, 1972

Attire: Business Casual

The MAA will be honoring recipients of its two annual awards as well as the golden anniversary classes of 1970, '71 & '72 during our awards luncheon and business meeting at Westminster Hall.

REUNION 2022

Jeffrey L. Metzner, '75 is recipient of the 2022 Honor Award & Gold Key, presented since 1948 for outstanding contributions to medicine and distinguished service to mankind. A professor of psychiatry at the University of Colorado School of Medicine, Metzner's primary focus has been on forensic psychiatry and advocating for improvement of psychiatric care in America's penal system. He is widely published, and since 2001 has served on the editorial board of Behavioral Sciences & the Law.

Otha Myles, '98, is recipient of the 2022 MAA Distinguished Service Award, presented since 1986 for outstanding contributions to the MAA and medical school. As class president, Myles has organized his five-year reunions since graduation. He was elected to the MAA Board of Directors beginning in 2003 and rose to the presidency in 2010. Since the early 2000s, he has organized a social event for African-American alumni which generated support for the Donald E. Wilson Scholarship Fund. The annual event became so popular that the school adopted it as its annual Celebrating Diversity Dinner event, expanding it to include faculty, staff, and students of all ethnicities. After a 10-year career in the U.S.

Army focusing on HIV-AIDS, Myles, an infectious diseases expert, served on the Maryland faculty for a few years and is now based in St. Louis.

Members of the class of 1970, '71, & '72, celebrating their golden anniversaries, will be recognized, and the MAA will be electing five officers and three directors during this luncheon, constituting the annual business meeting of the MAA. On the ballot for election as president is Walker L. Robinson, '70.

FRIDAY

Friday, May 6

The 28th Historical Clinicopathological Conference

1:30–3:00 pm Free attendance, but reservations required • Attire: Business Casual • Reception to follow
Davidge Hall

Historical figures, whose deaths have not been satisfactorily explained, are patients for our annual conference. Past conferences have examined the deaths of Edgar Allan Poe, Alexander the Great, Mozart and others.

Islamic Polymath

Born in 980 C.E. near Bukhara (present day Uzbekistan), this patient would become one of the towering figures of the Islamic Golden Age. He was a philosopher, poet, mathematician, expert in Islamic jurisprudence, astronomer and physician, who traveled extensively throughout Persia during the 11th century C.E. By the age of 16, he had mastered the art of medicine as it then existed. He would transform his knowledge of Aristotelian, Galenic, Arabian, Persian and Indian medicine into a Canon of Medicine, which became the most widely used comprehensive medical text of the Middle Ages.

Except for the patient's final illness, we know little of his medical history. Other than a serious illness of unknown character in his early 20s, he appears to have enjoyed excellent health until age 55, when he began suffering with recurrent "colic," which eventually took his life. Regarding his family, we know he had a brother 5 years younger than he and a father who died when the patient was 22. Nothing more is known of their medical history or that of his mother.

The patient never married and had no known offspring but was renowned for having exercised his "concupiscent [sexual] facilities" with uncommon regularity. Though a practicing Muslim, he was no paragon of Islamic piety. Wine, which he consumed in large amounts, helped to inspire him when confronted with some new problem or working on one of his numerous compositions.

The early stage of the patient's final illness began 3 years before his death with recurrent attacks of colic (abdominal pain). Whether these attacks were accompanied by other symptoms is not known. His only known sick contact prior to the illness was a patron who he had treated for recurrent colic two decades earlier.

The terminal phase of the patient's final illness began in 1034 C.E. with recurrence of his colic, while trying to escape enemy troops who were looting Isfahan, where he was then residing. Fearful that the illness would cause him to fall into the hands of the invaders, the patient tried to accelerate his recovery by administering “an enema to himself eight times in one day, to the point that some of his intestines ulcerated and an abrasion broke out on him. . . [and caused him to be] afflicted by seizures, which sometimes follow the colic. And in spite of that he treated himself and administered enemas to himself for the abrasion and for the resolution of the colic. Then one day, wishing to break the wind of the colic, he ordered that two [doses] of celery seed be included in the enema. But one of the doctors whom he ordered to treat him threw in five [doses] of celery seed—[It is not known] whether [the doctor] did it intentionally or by mistake. . . [in that] the abrasion was aggravated by the sharpness of the seed. In addition, [the patient] used to take mithridate [a paste named after Mithridates of Pontus, usually containing opium] on account of the seizures, but one of his slaves threw a great deal of opium into it. . . The reason for this was their stealing a great deal of money from [the patient's] coffers; [the slaves] desired [the patient's] death in order to be free from the consequences of their actions. . . [The patient] was [then] so weak he was unable to stand, so he continued to treat himself until he was able to walk. . . [though] he did not take care and frequently had sexual intercourse. . . intermittent relapses and recovery [followed]. [Ultimately] his strength wasted away and. . . was not sufficient to repel the illness. So [the patient] ceased treating himself. . . He remained like this for a few days; then he passed away [at age 58] into the presence of his Lord and was buried in Hamadan in the year 1037 C.E.”

The 28th Historical Clinicopathological Conference 2022 Participants

Herbert L. DuPont, MD, is the Mary W. Kelsey Distinguished Chair of Medical Sciences and professor of internal medicine at the University of Texas McGovern Medical School and professor of infectious diseases and epidemiology at the University of Texas School of Public Health. He is a former president of the Infectious Diseases Society of North America, the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases, the American Clinical and Climatological Association, and was the founding president of the International Society of Travel Medicine. He earned his medical degree from Emory University in 1965, trained at University of Minnesota Hospitals, and received fellowship training at Maryland where he remained on the faculty until 1973.

Mohammad M. Sajadi, MD, is an associate professor of medicine and infectious diseases, Institute of Human Virology at the University of Maryland School of Medicine where he graduated in 1997. He is an HIV physician researcher with interests in the study of humoral immunity and HIV. Sajadi's lab is successfully funded with grants from the NIH, Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, and the Veteran's Administration. He has co-authored several historical papers including "Ibn Sina and the Clinical Trial," Annals of Internal Medicine in May 2009.

Medical Curriculum Update

3:30–4:15 pm

Davidge Hall

The challenge in medical education today is to equip students with all the wonderful advances in science and technology without compromising the doctor-patient relationship. Joseph Martinez, '98, assistant dean for student affairs and associate professor of emergency medicine presents this update on Maryland's new Renaissance Curriculum and pandemic-related challenges the administration confronted over the past two years. Dr. Martinez will field questions following his presentation.

Saturday, May 7

Campus Walking Tour

9:30–10:30 am

Davidge Hall

Health Sciences Facility III, a 450,000 square-foot state-of-the-art research complex is just one of the new facilities to spring up over the past decade. We've also expanded Shock Trauma, our BioPark and Hospital. And over the past two decades we've witnessed the openings of a campus center, health sciences library, plus new buildings for our law, dental, and nursing schools. Our tour will corroborate recent claims that University of Maryland Baltimore has become one of the country's finest health sciences institutions. This outdoor walking tour begins and ends at Davidge Hall.

Saturday, May 7

Restoring Davidge Hall: An Update

10:45–11:45 am

Davidge Hall

The school is gearing up for a restoration project involving both the interior and exterior of our National Historic Landmark, and the plan is to return the old medical building to its appearance in the early 1800s. Blueprints are currently being drafted for restoration of the dome and gable roof. A personal tour is part of the 60-minute presentation.
